TABLE-TALK OF WAR, The Lighter Side of Lord

Wolseley's Book. Lord Wolseley's career is much too wellknown to demand any recapitulation here, even if it were pussible to trace it in the pages of his book, as it is not. The Stor, of a Soldier's 'Life' is in reality but onehalf of that story, and it is a keen disappointment to find that these two volumes do not bring us so late into Lord Welse-Tay's life as the two-volume life published

Lord Wolseley closes with the Ashantee war- the most horrible war I ever took part in '-and not a word has he said in his 770 pages of the last thirty years of his life. So that, except for its greater authority, his book hardly replaces the volumes al; ready on our shelves. But it is the only adverse criticism we have to make, and we shall not be ungrateul to Lord Wolseley if he decides to continue his story up to our own day. His pages are a mine of interest for those who would dip casually into them, and one comes across such stories as that of the unpopular Irish colonel who, just before his regiment moved into action, called the men together, and said: 'I understand that you mean to shoot me to-day, but I want you to do me a favour : don't kill me until the battle is well over.' It was quite true; they had meant to shoot him, but his daring saved his life-though history tells us he never reformed. THE DOCTOR'S DILEMMA..

The doctor on board the ship which took Lord Wolssley to India fifty years ago comes into these reminiscences. He was a Hercules in strength, and when, with his wife and child, he was upset from a boat, he took one under each arm, and swam vigorously for shore; but, becoming ex-106 hausted, he had to drop his child to save his wife. As they neared Calcutta the minute gun was being fired from Fort William, and a voice cried out: 'The Duke of Wellington is dead !' In India he first commanded an outpost, and took three prisoners for disobedience. before whom they appeared next morning was also an Irishman, who had been carried about in China in a cage for the amusement of ntillions who had never before seen a European. The sc ne was very solemn, and Lord Wo'seley expected that at least they would be transported, if 3 not sentenced to death. There was an awful pause, and then-'A volley of oaths from the colonel relieved the atmospheric pressure. He called the pris ners 'limbs of Satan ! ' and choking, partly, at least I should say, from an assumed fury, and partly because his vituperative vocabulary had come to an end, he jumped to his feet, ups tring the table, with its ink-bottle, papers, etc., and rushed upon the prisoners, kicking hard WILD DELL BUILDINGS. THE ANGRY SOLDIER. Ali sorts, and conditions of men Lord Wolseley has known. One was a young 2030 officer in the Crimea to whom, as he lay up in the stre cher, Lord Raglan went up to say: 'My poor young gentleman; I hope you are not badly burt? 'This brutal our-I subsequently know the creature well -says. Lord Wolseley, 'turned upon him, and, in the rudest terms and most savage manner, denounced him as responsible for every drop of blood had been shed that day! Wounded though this ungenerous fellow was, I could a salarish pleasure have run my sword through file unmanly carcase at the moment." It is a prettier story that he tells of an officer who fell in love, and on proposing to the young lady, learnt that she was in love with his younger brother, to whom forth with the officer made over his possessions that the two might marry.

A TERRIBLE SIGHT. But there are many terrible things in this book, and the realities of war come home to us vividly as we read. How mary of us have ever looked on such a 2504 eight an this? One of their shot cut a gunner in two,

It was a ghastly, and uncanny sight. The artillery captain in command a real good men, dazed like myse'f, by the horror of the spactacle, said excitedly; 'What shall I do? Shall I put him out of pain !" B before a doctor could be found the poer fellow had ceased to move.

It is one of the memories which make Lord Wolseley shadder when he thinks of them to-day. He must shudder, too, when he remembers the vultures that followed them on their long marches !--

'It was a terrible thing at times to be left behind with a dying man, bury him at il e moment he had ceased to breathe, and to watch the horrid vultures which, fromthe neighbouring trees, scanned us closely while waiting for their prey. . . . They never left us, but followed us daily on the march, not as guardian angels, but as louth: some scavangers."

' How many such gallant soldiers,' Lord Wolseley reflects, 'lie thus buried all over the world, marking the routes of the minion that have made our Empire what it la'; and 'it is their valour,' he tel's us that enables home tradesmen to make fortunes, live at ease, and to marry their ----- and daughters into gentle families,"

WHEN COURAGE FAILS. . There is a vivid picture of a false alarm by night, with an army in the field, and to Lard Wolkeley, he tells us, it has always home 'literally terrifying to see brave sol tiers not only thus bereft of reason, but Itah for the moment of courage also : -

The extent to which stalpart robbiers may become a terrified med in the twink ling of an eye is amazing. The surroundmy darknoss, and the suddinness with which they are awakened; the shouts, and, still worse, the clang of orms, all add to their causeless flight. Mon to bewildered free bayonet ene another ; I have known owen officers to cut the wn their contactor in to first bired of wild storm.

there, we are tald, in one of these and parties, an officer took nim at an enemy on t out a bullet the right his foot!

Yet there is nothing like a rush, and Lord Wolseley becomes a boy again in recalling the supreme moment of a soldier's life, when he 'ran for the enemy's stockedes at the head of a small mob of addiers, most of them boys like myself. Never has he known again the same 'unalloyed and elevating satisfaction,' and there is something pathetic in his 'the that I could minin hope to experience such consations Seattered throughout Lord Wobeley's ing a am some interesting reflections. He. we one or two !"

OBSTER DETA.

We went India by the sword, and .... that sword must always he kept sharp and ready for uso.

If she (Germany) ever becomes a firstclass naval Power, her people will perhaps realise how impossible it is for even the richest nations to be pre-ensinent upon both land and sea. To me they (the Chinose) are the most remarkable race on earth, and I have always thought and still believe them to be great coming rulers of the world.

Surely, impartial men will for ever put Napoleon, by himself and in front of all a homan beings." .

A little confession, which he has 'never rold any one,' Lord Wolseley makes in his book. He has often thought to himself, before the bullets have begun to whistle; near him, whother he would le killed that day, and his one dread has been-a dread ; that are into his soul- that if killed he would die without havi g made the name he hoped a merciful God might permit him to win. All through my life sinner though I have been-I trusted implicitly in God's providence; I believed He watched over me, and intended me for some important work. - Daily Mail.

FIRE AT CANTON.

(From Our Cun Correspondent). JARTON, January 16. On Thursday night a bamboo and ma

ructure at Wong Sha that was being used by the Railway Company as a store room was destroyed by fire. It contained five or six thousand dollars' worth of provisions and several hundred dollars in silver. The silver was melted and when found was all one mass. There is evidence that the fire was of incendiary origin. The structure was isolated, and there is no reason why there should have been any fire in it. The evening before this fire occurred the mess hall of the workmen at Five Eye Bridge was burned, and it is suspected that some one set it on fire.

RUSSIA WANTS COREA.

No 'Open Door' in Manchuris. The Standard's correspondent in Moscow telegraphed on the 13th December :-Though entirely dependent upon the non-Russian Press for all intelligence about events in the Ear East, the Russian papers are to-day disposed three joice that matters have taken a favourable turn for Russia in the negotiations with Japan. They are most indignant that such versions should be believed as represent Russis anxiously awaiting Japanese 'demands' and even an 'ultimatum.' The truth is, says the Novoyo Vremja, that Japan dare not put any demands, to say nothing of an Ultimatum, to such a powerful nation as Russia. Moreover, the Fereign Crass is mistaken in supposing that Manchucia forms any part of the subject under discussion, which is solely concerned with the status of Korea. Manchuris ie, and has always been, a question for Russia and China only, with which no other nation has a particle of right to interfere. Russia is treating with Japan about Korea on perfectly equal terms, ulthough Russia may acknowledge that Ja-panese interests are somewhat greater in that that they then her own. There is no questo rati a partition of Korea, which would not son the purposes of Russia. 'If South restores were to be ceded to Japan, the latter would become master of the Strait thur would be cut off. In other words. this evidently means that Korea must be protected until Russia is able to swallow that country herse f, in furtherance of her undoubted ambition to become a great sea The Bourse Guzette says the Far Esstern crisis has now lost its scute symptoms, and for the present, a peaceful colution may be confidently looked foward to, though, at tho same time, it is impresible to say what 22.6 Let be in store for Russia there in the ediate future. China, and protect our neighbour Korea from the underhand approaches of Japan.'

Dalziel's correspondent at St. Peteraburg cabled on the 15th December :-It is now known that Russia's reply to Japan is confined exclusively to the question of Kores, and does not even sllude to Manchuris. Russia intimates that she cannot withdraw her claims to move troops across Northern Korea, as it is of the highest importance for her to have an alternative means of access to Port Arthur and direct communication between Port Arthur and Vladivostock. Russia, it is understood, declares further that it is decessors, winning the first and losing the remaining four matches. When the Australians went to England in 1902 they won to do what she likes with Notwithstanding that these proposals are far from what Jaran is in principle disposed to grant, it is expected confidently hero that she will finish by accepting them, the more so as Russis has indirectly given it to be understood that in that event she would be prepared to exchange views with Japan on the subject of Manchuris, and meet her on that question as far as possible. This must not be taken to imply, however, that Russis will agree to the principle of the Open Door in Manchuria. She is willing to make concessions, but will not go to such a length as the Open Door unless Japan is vigorously supported by the other Powers. The eventual attitude of the United States in this connection is being much discussed in Government circles with no inconsiderable amount
